Following editorial from Philadelphia Enquirer, 14 Nov entitled "Thin uniforms in icy Korea" for your information: "With an already bitter Korean winter growing rapidly colder, report from Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent on the battlefronts, of a lack of suitable winter clothing-in some cases any kind of winter clothing-among American troops presents a situation that is shocking and outrageous.

"North Korean weather is already icy, and weather experience in that area indicates probable temperature averages of about 6 degrees below zero in January." But Mr Whitehead describes seeing more American soldiers clad in thin cotton garments than in woollens.

"Suitable winter equipment, according to military men, should include such items as woolen garments with extra wind-breaker trousers, long woolen underwear, wool-line gloves or mittens, a war cap with earflaps and a pair of 'shoepacs' with tick felt lining and at least 2 pairs of woolen socks."

"From the indications, little or no equipment of this character is on hand, and the most determined steps should be taken to get it to the battle areas. American fighting men in Italy and Germany during the last war suffered intensely in cold weather because warm clothing was slow in arriving. There is no excuse for a repetition of this condition, and the causes behind it are a pressing subject for a Congressional inquiry".

"A nbr of correspondents in Korea have sent dispatches describing mass executions by South Koreans. The victims were accused of collaborating with the North Korean Army in one way or another during the Communist occupation of Seoul and other towns below the 38th Parallel. In grps of a dozen or more, including usually some women, the prisoners have been taken from their jails and shot.

"In the latest dispatch describing such an execution, Bill Shinn of the Assoc Press says no more news of this sort is to be expected, not because there are to be no more mass executions but because an Army Order has been issued forbidding correspondents to observe them

"Nobody can blame the South Koreans for imposing severe punishment on persons guilty of atrocities. Beyond this, the Koreans have a right, if they chose to use it, to execute persons guilty of giving material aid to the invader. The people of the US, however, have an equal right to know all they care to know about the executions, including the nbr of persons put to death, the crimes with which they were charged, and the kind of trial, if any, they recd. our military authorities are uncomfortable over the behavior of the South Koreans in these matters and fear that the South Koreans are injuring their cause and ours by their actions. If so, the proper remedy is not to suppress the news but to insist on fair trials in open court, with ample opportunity for the defendants to present witnesses on their own behalf and cross-examine the prosecutions witnesses. All this wld be helpful in teaching the Koreans the ways of justice.

"Beyond this, we ought to use our influence over the south Koreans to discourage wholesale vengeance. REURMSG Z 31116 OPI Sec def released 15 December: "Distinguished Unit Citation awarded 24 Infantry Division" text follows: "The Department of the Army today announced award of a Distinguished Unit Citation to the 24 Infantry Division and the attached 441 Counter Intelligence Corps Team for "... extraordinary heroism in combat against numerically superior enemy forces in Korea ..."

The citation follows:

"The 24 Infantry Division and the attached 441 Counter Intelligence Corps Team is cited for exceptionally outstanding performance of duty and extraordinary heroism in combat against numerically superior enemy forces in Korea from 2 July to 15 September 1950. When the gravity of the military situation in South Korea and shortage of immediately available transportation necessitated piecemeal commitment of the division despite its one third shortage in all essential elements, it faced an enemy force estimated to be a completely equipped corps, delayed this force and limit its advance. Stubbornly resisting the enemys drive from Osan, where the advance force of 2 companies bravely blunted the driving onslaught, the division though outnumbered, outgunned and outarmored in the face of continual frontal attacks, intense guerilla activities and infiltration on exposed flanks, succeeded in delaying the enemys main effort until United Nations reinforcements arrived in the critical combat zone. Fighting in the streets of Taejon, where the division commander himself led rocket launcher assaults, the enemy was to pay dearly for every mile gained. Time and time again fierce fighting took place throughout the delaying action when front line units decimated waves of attacking enemy with rifle machine gun and artillery fire, then killed the remnants that reached their position with bayonet and grenades. On 24 July, when a grave threat to the vital port of Pusan was made by superior enemy forces from the West, the division was called upon to meet this crisis. With only 2 days rest it met this critical menace and foiled the enemys attacks; battalions and companies tenaciously gave ground exacting a heavy toll of enemy dead and stopped this advance. Moving to a sector on the central Naktong River front it resisted and later eliminated a dangerous enemy bridgehead that threatened the entire UNs beachhead. This determined and successful attack completely destroyed 1 enemy division as a fighting force. The division again distinguished itself in early September when it reinforced a Republic of Korea Unit whose lines had been breached in the Kyongju-Pohang Sector. By skillful strong attacks this last serious threat to the final defensive area was eliminated. Throughout the entire period of this heroic action, officers and men distinguished themselves by conspicuous gallantry and courage. Service troops fought side by side with riflemen, supply and medical personnel performed their missions despite enemy infiltration and flank penetrations. Engineers fought as Infantry and stopped hostile assaults with mines and demolitions. Artillerymen fought off attackers to keep their guns in action, in fact every man in the division was engaged in battle. The individual and collective heroism displayed by all ranks of the 24 Infantry Division in its valiant stand against great odds reflect the highest credit upon itself and the Armed Forces of the United States."

Fol is example of editorial on newly imposed security instructions.

"What is euphemistically described as 'security screening' of news dispatches from Korea actually is mil censorship, and it is necessary. The only questions are why it has been so long in coming and why Gen MacArthur's Hq does not call it by its rightful name? Most correspondents and newspapers would have welcomed mil clearance of dispatches long ago as protection against involuntary breaches of security. An unwarranted burden is thrown upon reporters when they are left to decide what should be withheld for military reasons. This 'voluntary' system has broken down more than once.

"What actually precipitated the clamp-down seems to have been the disclosure by the British News Agency, Reuters, of the progress of the evacuation from Hungnam—a story picked up by other news serv'ce. This dispatch gave sufficient detail so that the en could have made use of it to inflict hvy damage on the assembled Naval Fleet. It was a flagrant breach, and the fact that it happened emphasizes the merit in Lt Gen Sir Horace Robertson's assertion that security is more important in defensive action than in the offensive.

"In any event, there can be no question about Gen MacArthur's right to impose censorship. Whenever there is censorship there is always danger that it will be used foolishly to bottle up information on little security value or to cover mistakes. Such abuses, of course, would be to rebound. But so long as the censorship is confined to matters of genuine security importance and correspondents are notified what is deleted and why, the procedure must be accepted."

Following Associated Press material, datelined Tokyo, received here 13 Dec forwarded for your information:

"The evacuation was orderly but hurried. The threat of a Dunkerque - a withdrawal under murderous fire and attack - mounted with each passing hour.

"The first Chinese attack stepped up the evacuation pace. But, the withdrawal was expected to require at least several more days.

"More than 100 Chinese disguised in American uniforms with parka headgear smashed against the US 3d Div Sector at 7:30 AM (5:30 PM, EST, Tuesday).

"A Doughboy company counterattacked and drove off the Reds after 3 hours of fighting.

"Red snipers poured fire into the beachhead throughout the night. Eight Red Koreans armed with grenades and a gun were seized inside the defense line.

"Front dispatches said there was no hope that all the mass of weapons and supplies could be carried away by sea. There wasn't the shipping for it. Loading in the once great shipping harbor was pushed under great difficulties.

"Allied bombing early in the war virtually destroyed the port. Warehouses and machine shops were gutted. Giant cranes needed to move cargoes were twisted and rusty.

"Supplies and equipment impossible to load will be destroyed.

"One Army officer said 42 Korean locomotives and 675 freight cars would be peeled off a railroad bridge into the Tongsongchon River.

"One warehouse was crammed with popular brands of American cigarettes, free for the taking. Stacks of combat rations were junked.

"General MacArthur's Wednesday afternoon War Summary made no mention of the evacuation. Only 90 words long, it said Tuesday ground activity was limited to patrol actions both around Hungnam and in the west where the Army Eight is ranged in defense positions north of Seoul.

"X Corps units moving aboard ships at Hungnam included the Army's 7th and 3d Divs; the Marine 1st Div which fought a bloody retreat from Changjin Reservoir along with some Doughboys; South Koreans from the 3d Div and possibly the Capital Division; the Puerto Rican 65th RCT and a few British Royal Marines."

Following Herald Tribune Press Service item carried in Washington Post 13 Dec forwarded for your information:

'London, Dec 12 (NYHT).--Vehement attacks on General Douglas MacArthur and hints of sinister goings on in Korea in the military sphere suddenly appeared in British newspapers today. The articles, sent by British correspondents with Commonwealth Forces, referred to 'Mao's Ghost Army' and said British Forces had not seen the enemy for a week.

'The reputable Manchester Guardian carried this headline over one such article: 'British in Korea Suspect Talk of Chinese 'Hordes.''

'The article said in part: 'British staff officers frankly confess that they are puzzled by the way the United Nations withdrawal has been conducted. They believe that, with the well-trained, stubborn troops available, a firm line might have been established around Pyongyang and Chinnampo that could have wrested the initiative from the Chinese. The British troops are supremely confident that they can handle almost anything the Chinese can throw at them.'

'A British officer was quoted as saying, 'Friction between ourselves and the Americans is growing.'

'The 'Daily Mirror' Correspondent said 'the full story cannot yet be told but the fact must be recognized that incessant withdrawal without fighting is bound to cause a certain amount of bitterness between the various national groups in the Army East.'

The story continued: "The whole war has become peculiar. At lunchtime I was invited by the Northumberland Fusiliers to go pheasant shooting . . . the Ulster Rifles, with whom I spent the afternoon, were cheered off because they had passed through villages where the whole population is being bumped off by Korean police. And they had seen Korean students being bombed by friendly planes because they wore black tunics like those of the Communists.

"Whatever the Chinese may or may not do, this has become a dirty, nasty business."

Articles in a similar vein appeared in two or three other London morning newspapers. A War Office spokesman refused comment and said "We have had no operational intelligence on the recent fighting in Korea."

Religious News Service has applied for accreditation for Jean C Fisher, wife of Sterling Fisher of Readers Digest, to be their correspondent in Japan and Korea. She came to theater as dependant wife of commercial entrant and you have denied change of status for her husband. She has no previous newspaper experience although she served as assistant to a religious radio commentator for several months according her application. Informatively last correspondent accredited to Religious News Service was C Y Ting in Germany and Ting departed theater without notice leaving unpaid debts to Berlin Military Post of $831 which religious News Service disclaimed responsibility for although they signed usual certificate of employment assuming responsibility for correspondent. Your views and decision on desirability accredited Jean Fisher will be appreciated.

Following CBS broadcast of last night for your info. Will send complete text of Christian Science Monitor article when it arrives. Gordon Walker believed to be author of this article.

"Boston exclusive special-in tomorrow's morning edition of The Christian Science Monitor there will be the sensational story of the darkest pages in American military history. The Monitor will say that while sources in this country are merely hinting at disaster in Korea, sources in the field are experiencing some of it already.

The Christian Science Monitor tomorrow reveals that the UN troops are retreating in some cases in such pell-mell haste that the enemy can't keep in touch with them.

The Monitor will also reveal that one UN division left all its artillery and supplies on the field; that only about half of that division reached Seoul where it was examined and declared unfit for combat. From another source I learned that the Chinese soldiers are so short of ammo that they had to stop to search the bodies found on the battlefield.

The Monitor story tomorrow morning will give you a picture of the mechanized army fleeing in jeeps and trucks from an overwhelming load of poorly equipped Chinese who were following on mules, ponies and camels. Top mil observers believe that only personal appearance of MacArthur or Eisenhower on the field of battle in Korea can reverse the tide and bring order out of chaos.

A war story of an entirely different type which has yet to be told in faith is the performance of Maj Gen Smith and his Marines. Rather than desert their wounded they stood their ground and fought off overwhelming swarms of Chinese and by the airlift brought them back to safety. Thus far more than 15,000 wounded they took from Korea to Japan by airlift.

"Russia today renewed a charge that the US has been using Japanese 'Mil Pers' in the Korean fighting.

"A Soviet Del told the 13-Nation Far Eastern Commission that the US made an 'unsatisfactory' reply Nov 16 to the charge and 'avoided replying to the substance' of the Russian allegation.

"Reading from press reports that Japanese manned minesweepers and transport vsls, the Soviet Rep declared these 'prove' a 'direct violation of the agreed decisions on the Demilitarization of Japan.'

"The charges were based on quotations from Newsweek Magazine, the Christian Science Monitor, the newspaper Nippon Times of Japan and the Washington Evening Star."
